

ABSTRACT

A compressor assembly includes a compressor having a known vibration frequency when operated at normal operating parameters; and an electric box assembly having a frame member mounted to the compressor for containing electrical components related to the compressor, the electric box assembly having a natural frequency which is different from the known vibration frequency. This avoids amplification of vibration into the electric box assembly and thereby protects the assembly from damage due to same.